Category:XML-based programming languagesQ: How to autofocus/autoclear a textbox upon form submit in Rails 3.0.3? I'm building a simple site for a friend of mine in Rails, and I'm trying to make an autofocus and autoclear textbox. I've tried the following: Using type: text: Using a button to submit the form, and adding a submit button to the form that calls a js function. Here's the function: $("#signup_subject").live('keyup change', function() { $("#signup_subject").attr("value", ""); }); What are my options? Thanks! A: If you have a text_field_tag with autofocus set to true you'll need to remove that attribute to clear the field on the submit. Otherwise the browser will request focus on the field automatically when the form is submitted. If you want to submit the form you'll need a button with onclick that will submit the form. You can also use rails form helpers to create a tag with the autofocus attribute set to true. Evaluation of the safety and accuracy of a noninvasive method of estimating upper gastrointestinal transit time in children. Compared to in vivo techniques, little is known about the accuracy and safety of the noninvasive method for calculating upper gastrointestinal (GI) transit time in children. To evaluate the safety and accuracy of noninvasive techniques for estimating upper GI transit time in children. Upper GI transit time was measured using a noninvasive method and compared with an in vivo technique in 20 children (median [range] age: 3.9 [2.0-12.9] years) with chronic gastrointestinal symptoms (median [range] follow-up: 5.3 [1.6-19.7] years), including five with suspected motility disorder. Correlation and agreement between methods were assessed. The noninvasive method was less accurate

A: I know that the OP is looking for a way to avoid php and Drupal, but I don't know whether that is the perfect solution, and it's not a matter of dnxcore, it is rather a matter of xslt and xsd which you may or may not want to give up. Here is the core functionality from w3schools and what I did. This does not mean that you can't use that information in a WordPress project - I don't see the point in giving away the same information from everywhere. Without understanding xslt this is a stretch, but I had to start somewhere. You can pretty much adjust that to your needs. My Main Menu.xml Website /website Default Index page I got some other files from this link This is the way I loaded it into the nav menu b7e8fdf5c8
